Issues

- Sample sizes
- Item imputation in 2001
- Change in recorded ethnic group, 1991-2001
- Loss to follow-up

Ethnicity in the LS

- 1971 Census: Country of birth, parental COB
- 1981 Census: Country of birth
- 1991 Census: Ethnicity, Country of birth
- 2001 Census: Ethnicity, Country of birth and religion (voluntary)

Change in ethnic group

- Consideration of change in ethnic group is important for understanding the composition of groups over time
- Almost 1 in 4 people recorded as Black African or Black Caribbean in the 1991 Census reported a different ethnicity in 2001, compared with less than 1 in 10 South Asian and Chinese people, and less than 1 in 200 White people
- Change in individuals' reported ethnic group between the 1991 and 2001 Censuses reflected the introduction of new response categories in 2001, especially for mixed ethnicities

Per cent of people in selected 1991 ethnic groups reporting the same group in 2001

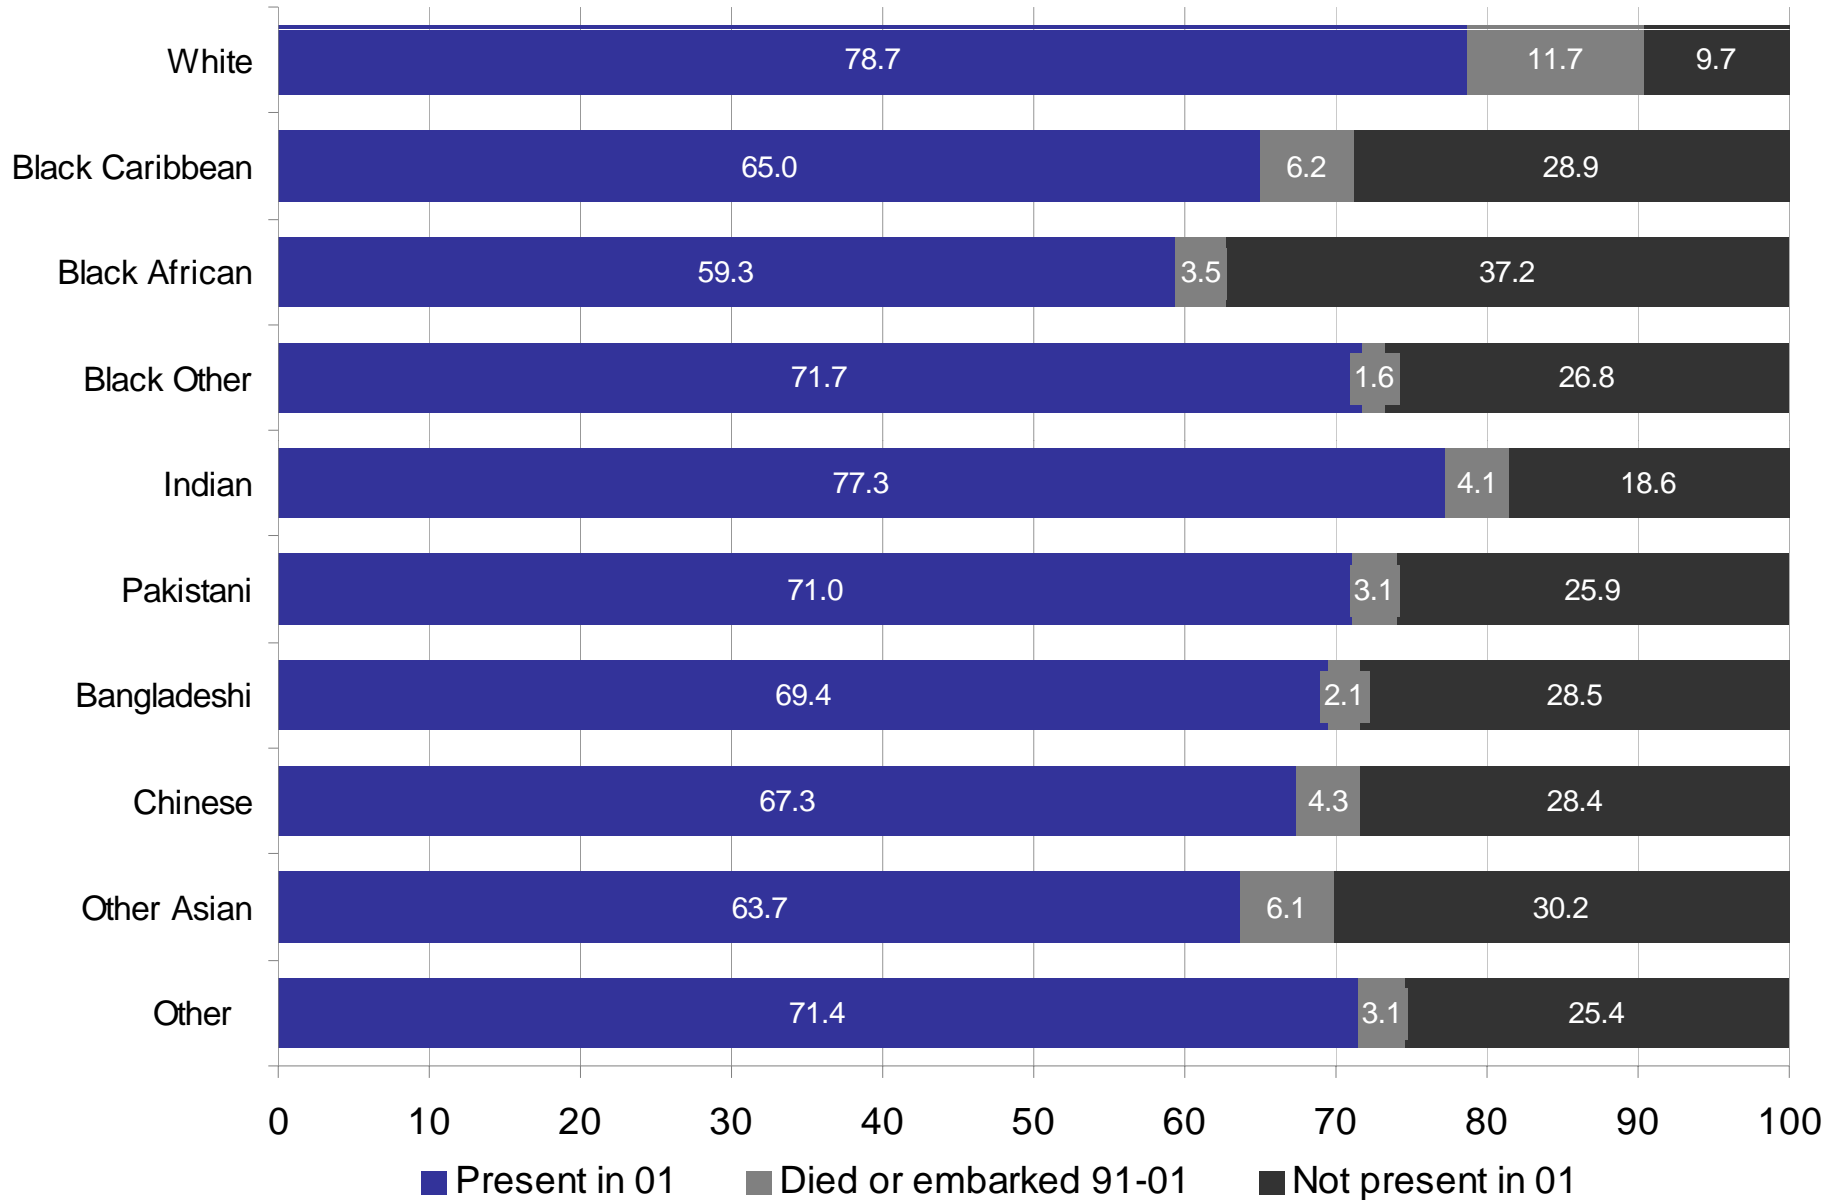

2001 ethnicity reported by people in the 1991 Other Black group

Loss to follow-up

- Loss between two censuses without valid exit (death or embarkation)
- Caused by:
 - Unobserved embarkation
 - Census underenumeration
 - Linkage failure (mismatched records)
- Higher rates of loss to follow-up among minority ethnic groups
 - 16 per cent of 1991 Black Africans expected in 2001 were not found

Follow-up of the 1991 traced LS sample by ethnic group

Summary

- Small sample sizes may constrain ethnic group analysis
- Need to consider how to treat 2001 item imputation
- Change in ethnic group between 1991 and 2001 should also be considered
- Loss to follow-up is higher among minority ethnic groups
 - Potential for bias
 - Impact on sample sizes when measuring transitions
